DISCUSSION

How is it possible for a bhikkhu to steal from the Sangha?

A bhikkhu drives away with the monastery car and never comes back. What are the consequences?

ı	٠

A bhikkhu is staying at the apartment of a lay friend, where they organize a small gathering, and they start drinking alcohol. The bhikkhu gets drunk, and eventually he goes to bed in his room. He wakes up, and finds a woman's underwear in his bed, with a note saying 'love and kisses', plus a used condom. Is the bhikkhu pārājika?

- (a) No, because he was drunk
- (b) No, if he was practising tantric freedom and compassion
- (c) Yes, since there is clear evidence of intercourse
- (d) Yes, even if he can't remember anything

Discussion: What if he convinces himself that he is pārājika, but later finds out that they had played a prank on him?

What conditional cases must be considered?

7.A. FALSE SPEECH 18

(i) A bhikkhu is talking with a visitor. He says he brought a few warm sweaters, and would like to offer them to the monastic community. The bhikkhu mentions that he actually needs one, and the man gives him one.

(A) nissaggiya pācittiya (B) pācittiya (C) dukkaṭa (D) no offenses

Discussion: Can the community decide to forbid a bhikkhu from using a diverted item?

What is the Pali name of a bhikkhu's upper, lower, and outer robe?

A bhikkhu discovers that the seams of his cotton jacket under the arm-pit where the cloth was joined, have come apart. What should he do?

Supporters wish to offer robe-cloth to the Community. They bring a piece of cloth as a sample, which is a white nylon material. Is there an offense in asking them to offer a better material?

After the Pavarana ceremony, the community holds a Kathina celebration. At the end, they relinquish the Kathina privileges. One of the bhikkhus, who didn't really want to relinquish the privileges, goes on tudong without taking his saṅghāṭi with him. Are there any offenses?

A bhikkhu wants to go tudong without his saṅghāṭi, and asks the community for permission to do so. Is this allowed?

Is a bhikkhu allowed to travel home without taking his sanghāṭi? Can he stay one night at a hospital without it?

A bhikkhu receives a nice leather-belt from a friend. Is it allowable?

A bhikkhu embroiders the sign of the Eye of Horus on his meditation blanket. Is it allowable?

A bhikkhu keeps his three robes in his kuti where he spends the night. Waking up early while it is still dark, he goes for a walk outside the monastery to watch the Sun rise. Is there any offense?

A bhikkhu takes some cloth from the stores to his kuti to make a sitting cloth. He forgets about it for a few weeks. Is there an offense?

A monk is visiting home. His old friends invite him to the skate park. He puts on a pair of jeans and a black T-shirt to go and see if he can still do an ollie. Is there an offense?

A bhikkhu asks his mother to buy him a new robe made of silk when she is travelling in Thailand, even though his mother has asked him not to ask for any more new robes. Is there an offense?

A bhikkhu is chosen by the community to receive the Kathina-robe. What are the eight Kathina duties? What is procedure when receiving the Kathina robe? What are the Kathina privileges?

A bhikkhu is travelling by plane. He packs his saṅghāṭi in the hold luggage. After landing, his hold luggage is missing. He registers the missing luggage with the airport services, but has to leave without it. The airport delivers his luggage in a few days. What are his duties?

A bhikkhu wants to mark his robe. He has an ink bottle, and plucks a blade of grass to make a mark on the robe. Are there offenses?

A monk realises his robe is bigger than the standard measurement 2.25m x 1.5m – could he confess this to another monk in the monastery?

How should one treat one's robes? If they are torn, or lost or are laid aside, how should one deal with it?

DISCUSSION

A samanera is visiting a monastery. The community organizes a sauna night before the uposatha day. The samanera is the last one to leave the sauna, but doesn't tidy up and clean the sauna, since this is not his monastery. How should one leave the sauna room after use?

A junior bhikkhu wants to go on a two-months long hike in Australia with a lay friend. His mentor doesn't give him permission. The bhikkhu decides he is going to be independent from now on, and makes his travel arrangements to Australia.

What are the consequences?

A bhikkhu calls a samanera 'slow as a megatherium' (an extinct giant ground sloth). Are there offenses? What are proper actions for the samanera to take?

A bhikkhu wants to go for a walk in the afternoon, crossing a village. The other bhikkhus are back at their kutis. He leaves without informing them.

It is a warm day, but it will be cold at night. A bhikkhu lights a fire when the Sun sets, to keep warm during the night.

A bhikkhu wants to boil water on tudong. He collects some branches and lights a fire under a tree.

A bhikkhu lights a fire to burn a pile of old branches and leaves on the ground. Is this an offense for him? Can the pile be burned without offenses?

A bhikkhu sees a large, delicious cake left in the temple in a gift box. He considers it a valuable item and carries it to the kitchen, for safe keeping. Is this an offense?

A bhikkhu sees a nice looking rock on the beach. He picks it up and keeps it in his kuti. Is this an offense? What if it turns out to be a piece of opalized wood (expensive)?

A bhikkhu goes for a walk and finds a key ring. He recognizes the car keys of a friend of the monastery. What should he do?

The abbot in a monastery tells the community that in his monastery, it's OK to let the visitors cook fresh prawns. A bhikkhu eats from a dish of fresh arroz com marisco (rice, prawns and mussels) cooked in the monastery from live prawns. Are there offenses?

The abbot tells the monks that in his monastery, they are not allowed to eat meat. A bhikkhu receives a few tins of sardines on alms-round, brings it back and eats from it at the meal. Are there offenses?

A bhikkhu opens a box of fruit-juice and drinks some of it, leaving the half-full box on the table. The next day, another bhikkhu sees the box of juice and drinks the remaining part. Any offense?

A supporter would like to offer food to a monk. She is unable to bring the food directly to the monk in person. She orders food using the internet and requests that the food is delivered in the morning. She then tells the monk to expect a food delivery in the morning. The food vendor processes the order and sends an autonomous drone (e.g. a storage box rolling on wheels or flying) to deliver the food to the monk's address. The drone arrives on time in the morning and brings the food to the monk. The monk removes the food from the drone's storage compartment. Are there offenses?

What if the drone is remotely operated by a person? (E.g. a hovering tray)

What are staple and non-staple foods in the Vinaya? Would it be correct to consider current (culturally) staple foods such as bread, pasta, potatoes as staple foods?

What are the other categories for edible items?

You are out on tudong, your clock reads 1.30pm, however the Sun looks like it hasn't yet reached it's high point, would there be any offense in eating any remaining food? How about if you eat food at this point in the monastery?

You find some food stuck in your tooth in the afternoon and swallow it, any offense?

What is miso and why is it life-time?

Is rice- or almond milk allowable in the afternoon?

What is a special feature regarding the instigator of Pc 38 (stored food)? What can we learn from this origin story?

What benefits can we associate with a regular alms round practice?

What are the finer staple foods?

What does ill and not ill mean?

While travelling you tell an anagārika to buy you some cheese and chocolate. What should be done with that cheese and chocolate if you receive it? Is there any exemption to this offense?

11.A. FOOD 1 26

A lay supported lifts a corner of a table to offer all the dishes to a bhikkhu, is the food considered offered?

You are visiting family, they say, everything on this table is offered here today, would this be considered offered?

You are travelling 1st Class to Thailand, in the departure lounge there is a sign saying 'all this food is offered to those with a 1st class ticket' – is this considered offered?

An anagarika accidentally knocks a tray of offered food at the meal time, does the tray need to be reoffered?

A bhikkhu, by means of begging, is building a kuti for himself, without a sponsor. What are the two factors could then lead to a sanghadisesa offense? When is this offense incurred?

What are the differences here between Sg 6 and Sg 7?

What is the distance at which it is considered you have departed from the furnishings?

A bhikkhu sets out his mattress to air in the sun, then walks away, intending to return immediately. Does he incur an offense?

If there is to be an open-air meeting, who is responsible for the seats set out in the open?

Consider kutis or Sangha buildings with a large veranda, which is open on the sides but has a roof. Would this count as 'leaving out in the open' under Pc 14 (leaving bed or bench)?

Suggest some practical reasons for Pc 15 (spread bedding).

How is the bhikkhu who should not be forced to be moved defined in the Vibhanga?

Suggest valid reasons for intruding on a bhikkhu's dwelling.

Does Pc 17 (causing a bhikkhu to be evicted) cover physically throwing someone out and verbal eviction (ordering someone to leave) in the same way?

Suggest some valid reasons for evicting someone.

What is the purpose of Pc 18 (bed on an unplanked loft), as indicated in the origin story?

What can be understood as the reason for Pc 19 (supervising the building work)?

Suggest the main purpose for Pc 87 (tall bed or bench).

Describe what the factors of effort and intention make under Pc 87.

What can be done if one receives from another an oversize bed or bench.

You are visiting a lay friend, and they invite you to make use of a high bed, with long legs, is it suitable to use it, what would be a suitable course of action?

What to do if not using the bed would seriously offend the lay supporter?

What is the purpose of Pc 88 (cotton stuffing)?

What comments from the Vinaya-mukha give guidance on how to use Pc 88 – how can this apply in the monastery and when visiting a lay persons home?

DISCUSSION

You would like to make use of a smaller bowl for a tudong – is there a way of doing this without fully relinquishing your current bowl?

A bhikkhu asks for a new bowl from a lay person, even though his current bowl is not broken. Following the protocol he relinquishes his new bowl to the sangha. In what way might he receive it back?

Is there an offense in putting away a needle case that a monk has left laying around?

You hide your friend's robe, knowing he will find it funny too – is there an offense?

If one obtains a bone, ivory, or horn needle box made by another—not at one's instigation—offense?

A bhikkhu finds a large bone while walking and carves it into a needle box as a gift – any offense?

What if he carves a robe- or belt fastener instead?

What is the general principle derived from Pc 86 (Needle box)?

DISCUSSION

A bhikkhu is accused of a Sanghadisesa offense. Who decides? Does this principle hold for all offenses?

What can a community do if a Bhikkhu is considered to have committed an offense but will not admit it?

You are travelling by car to a teaching engagement and a Siladhara comes along. Is there any offense?

Who is a relation? In theory, and in practice?

What is the procedure that is encouraged for bhikkhus to follow at the monasteries of this tradition when corresponding with the siladhara?

A siladhara wishes to give a gift to a bhikkhu. What is the procedure she should follow?

Does this procedure also apply if you wish to give a gift to a siladhara?

A siladhara offers to clean a bhikkhu's boots. How should the bhikkhu respond?
